Check the basics!

Research the company, the industry, the role, and who you're meeting (LinkedIn and Glassdoor are great tools for this). Just because the interview is virtual does not necessarily make it less formal.

Try to avoid tech failures

Check that you have up to date software for whatever program the interview will be conducted via, as well as ensuring that your device is fully charged or plugged in to minimise disruptions

Wear headphones!

Headphones or earphones minimise background noise and also maximise privacy, so it's best practise to utilise them if possible.

Dress smart!

It's best to dress as if you were going into a face-to-face interview. An accidental glimpse at pyjama bottoms is not likely to leave a good first impression.

Check your background

Ensure that your background is suitable (a tidy room or using a virtual background are both fine). Checking you are familiar with the video conference tool will also reduce stress.
